

This crop is what Iowa is known for! It's made into many products and can be found in our soda, cereal, candy, and can even be made into plastic!	Spread across toast or on that famous PB&amp;J this local jam is better than Welch's in my opinion!
_____ Eat Fresh! If you buy a turkey sandwich from this place most likely you're eating turkey grown in Iowa.	Bees buzz around producing this sweet liquid. It's great on all types of foods but watch out for the stingers if you get too close to the hive!
Grown on the cob, this is the kind we eat right out of the field. It's great in the summer and can be bought from trucks on the side of the street, grocery stores, or farmers markets. If you don't want it on the cob you can always eat it out of a can or find it in the frozen section!	Farmers use these big machines to do work in their fields. They can be many different colors, but the ones made here are green and "Run like a Deere" is their slogan.
It tastes great melted between two slices of bread and dunked in tomato soup, melted over broccoli, or in the form of nachos. This yellow block of food is also a great snack with crackers.	Round, juicy, and many different colors – maybe green and red and the best known. You can dip its slices into caramel or peanut butter, or have it baked in a pie or _____ sauce.
We like to eat these for breakfast, usually in a bowl with milk. They are crunchy and full of Iowa grown products.	This animal provides meat that we sometimes cook on the grill, or order from a restaurant like McDonald's. Many farmers in Dallas County grow the animals that give us this tasty meat.
This seafood product is usually found in the ocean. It tastes great with cocktail sauce, and you normally don't eat the tail.	This is a tasty breakfast item that can be scrambled, sunny side up, in an omelet, or hard boiled. A chicken lays these – Iowa has more than any other state
These can be used to make crayons, they can be found in chocolate bars, in vegetable oil and are one of the two crops that Iowa grows more of than any other state. Still need a hint. It is a type of bean.	We go oink oink, have four legs and a snout. Many people like the bacon we give them, but we also can give them so much more! Medicine, paintbrushes, even lotion and make-up!
This is a berry that is new to Iowa. It can be found in juice or in many health stores. This berry is rich in antioxidants which are good for your immune system.	This corn-based fuel fills up something that helps us get from one place to another. It goes vroom and usually sits in a garage.
This cold, white liquid tastes great with cookies, or mixed with chocolate. It is great for bones, full of calcium and usually a choice to drink at lunch. Des Moines (state capital) drinks more of this than any other city in the US.	Pancakes, waffles, even drizzled over sausage, this sugary sweet breakfast condiment makes the above foods taste delicious!
We decorate these at Christmas! Sometimes car fresheners are shaped like these. Mm, it smells like pine!	This yummy snack is a popular choice at movies. Pop! Pop! In the microwave. It's great with butter and salt.
